

HALLOWEEN

PET SAFETY TIPS

Chocolate, candy, and gum are more tricks than treats for pets. Skip those scary goodies and anything with xylitol (which can be deadly)!

Halloween decorations, particularly strobe lights, loud noises, and animated things should be kept secure and away from pets at all times.

Halloween is a safety risk for black cats. Keep yours inside or get them chipped in case they sneak out.

Taking Fluffy and Fido trick-or-treating? Most pets prefer to go as themselves, so don't force them to wear a costume.

Discarded candy, cupcake wrappers, and other trash can be too tempting for some pets to ignore. Keep all trash secure and out of pets' reach.

Use battery operated or electric candles to add that extra spooky touch to your Halloween decor without the fire hazard.

Trick-or-treaters at the door can push anxious pets over the edge. If possible, greet visitors outside or leave the candy bowl on the porch.

Keep anxious pets in a quiet, comfy room away from young children and Halloween chaos.

Ask your veterinarian for further tips if your pet's behavior changes during the holiday fun.
